The name TAUCHER WULF has been a byword on the coast ever since the company's founding in 1921.

It goes back to the legendary Otto Wulf, who knew the Elbe and its shallows, with all its quirks and dangers, better than anyone else.

Numerous spectacular rescues and assistance to ships in distress and their crews all bear witness to the actions and enthusiasm of this company.

Otto Wulf had an exceptional „nose“ and instinct, when it came to finding lost anchors and returning them to their owners. It was good business! This was passed on to the succeeding generations; meantime, members of the 3rd and 4th generations of the Wulf family are active and successful in the company.

The erstwhile pure salvage and assistance operation has over many decades turned into a modern towing and transport operation.

Home port and headquarters remains Cuxhaven as always, conveniently located geographically at the mouth of the Elbe. We established our branch at Rostock in 1993. Our own tugs and pontoons are stationed there, and are used very successfully.

With these two locations, we can cover the whole of the northern European coastline for our customers both quickly and cost-effectively. Our international customers much appreciate the expert and reliable work carried out by the Wulf staff, particularly when orders have to be carried out at short notice.

Alongside the deployment of tugs in the harbours, on the waterways and at sea, the transport by sea of wind-power generators, ships' engines, ship sections, working on marine building sites and carrying out oil-rig supplies all form important parts of our work.

We have the German agency for floating crane work up to 900 tonnes in weight both at sea and inland on building sites and in shipyards from our Danish colleagues.

Recovery and assistance, deployment of divers and transport of materials and people are still an important part of our activities.

We work together with well-known companies both at home and abroad when it is a matter of handling your enquiries and developing logistics for them. Our telephone lines are continuously manned, so call us; we'll solve your problems.
